

DAY 9

Cockington/Tea and Scones

Today in school our classes got mixed with Spanish people. There are now four groups instead of three. It was unusual at first, but then we all got along with them. After school had ended, we went to the town center of Torquay and had free time for about an hour. While we were there, we met German people from Bavaria who came to England for a class trip as well. At about 13:30 we started our walk to Cockington. We walked past the beach and a path next to a river and different kinds of plants. We had to watch out because there were also dangerous plants e.g. cow parsnip. Our amusing walk took us about 50 minutes. We stood in the middle of lovely cottages which were the "Weavers Cottage Tea Garden" and "The Old Granary". We had free time for about 45 minutes. There was a park between the cottages and the café "Seven Dials". Near the coffee shop there was the Cockington Parish Church where a few people went to.

In the same house next to the café there was the Cockington Gallery. There was a throne, on which Mr. Adam sat with a picture frame in his hands. Finally we got our cream Tea with scones at "Seven Dials". Most of us really liked it, but the scones were very filling. Three of us accidentally spilled their cream tea, which was very funny. Then we went back to Torquay. Since we were there too early, we had free time for about 50 minutes again. Almost everyone was at the beach. Afterwards the bus picked us up and brought us back to our host families.
