

England trip 2025 - Day 7 - May 18th

Kids of the Round Table: Tintagel & its cliffs

Today was a really special day. We went on a trip to Tintagel Castle, which is said to be the home of King Arthur and his round table. The sun was shining and the sky was clear and blue. It felt like summer had already arrived.

When we saw the ruins of the castle for the first time, it looked majestic. It was very big, almost like in a fairy tale. The building was full of little details and every corner looked interesting and cool.

After that, we went on the longest hike of our entire trip. The landscape all around the castle was beautiful. There were trees, colourful flowers and all sorts of birds. While walking in the fresh air with our friends we felt free and happy. Everyone talked, laughed and just enjoyed the day. I it was not only a trip, it felt more like an adventure and I think everyone will remember this day. The castle, the sunshine and, above all, our friends made it even better.

(Alma and Lia)

