Today was the second day in Torquay. Despite getting up at 7 we arrived a bit late at school – obviously problems with managing our time. 😞

After some WIFI- problems we had a short test at school which divided us into three groups.

All our teachers' names start with an 'A' – Anna, Andrew and Annabelle. They are really nice and have a great sense of humour. School ended after a few introductory games and some grammar at 12.15.

After we had had our lunch which the school provided, we walked to the city of Torquay and did a quiz on the place, looking for example for the best-selling book for young adult fiction at Waterstones (which is "Heartstopper" by the way) or the best ice-cream in town and recorded our weather forecast for the following day.

Some of us went shopping and found Primark to be a great shop. There is even 'Deichmann' and of course McDonalds.

On the way back to our host families some of us got dropped off too early and had to be picked up again later, so that the bus ride took ages. But in the end everything worked out fine and even Karla running into a dog didn't cause any harm, left both surprised but fine.
