

Tintagel

Today it was our last day in south-west England. We went to Cornwall. We left at 8:30 and it took us about two hours to go to Tintagel.

When we arrived we went for about 10 minutes to the ruins where the view was impressive. We had two hours time to explore the area in groups. Fortunately, the weather was perfect. It was sunny and a little windy. We saw the statue of King Arthur and the ruins of Tintagel. Then we got a little hungry because of the long walk over the hills, but there was a café where we could eat snacks like cake and ice cream and where we could buy something to drink. After the walk the weather was very hot, but we all had enough to drink. Unfortunately we didn't go to Boscastle. However, we had the chance to see Newquay. It is a wonderful city near the sea. We had one hour there to explore the city, eat something or to go to the beach.

When we were picked up, we safely went home to our host families.

Heidi and Greta